Ir has frequently been our privilege to cal attention in these columns to the clear and sound views expressed from time to time by Mr. CORONER STEWART upon the very important subject of Chinese evidence. As to the question itself, it cannot be denied that in a Colony like this, where we are, as is more clearly shown day after day, entirely in the hands of the Chinese community; it is drifting junks passing close, but yet too of the utmost importance that we should far from the Prays for a jump, dragging know, first how we are belooled; and, so them alongside the sea wall, and assisting condly, how we may avoid being so in the their balf frantic crows to land, among future, at least in one or two respects. It is shower of boxes, bundles and bage of effects unquestionable that our application of the poured from on board in the vague hope of tution to these people is the point at which we are taken by them completely at a disadvantage: "The British Constitution win not framed with any ulterior view to its was chiefly the acone of the above being applied to Colestial aubjects. It was built up by the people for whose use it was intended, and it was natural enough that those to whom the severities of the law were to be applied—that is, the bulk of the people -should have been tenaciously conservative of any little mitigating tenderness, such as the exemption of prisoners from the terrors of cross-examination. Mr. STEWART had a case before him on Wednesday and Thursday last, in connection with which a woman named Caux And was in the custody of the Police. The case did not appear to warrant any suspicion, at any rate of a grave nature upon in the usual way to choose whether sive, and is chiefly confined, besides the Prays. while at the same time she was fold that there appeared to be no serious charge as yet give her evidence, and in doing so she empleved so aptly the native talent for invenion, which springs perhaps from a too prolific mid. That, however, did not disconcert her in the least, and Mr. STEWART was obliged to cross-examine her to some extent, the spirit of even the British Constitution cion against the prisoner was very small. be could not press her much, and especially, he could not make her criminate herself Thus he got no satisfaction from her. He knew she had come there to tell a false tale and yet he was powerless to get at the truth -alone could have made the case clear. THE TYPHOON Since the mentorable Typhoens of September 8th and October 1st 1867. Hongkong has been providentially free from such fential visitations mp to this time, and although during the aum-

per mouths of the present year threatening. appearances in the weather on two or three occusions have called forth prophesies from the went bor-wise of improding disasters, these have happily been bitherto unfounded and nothing worse than a few noughle and heavy rains have resulted and it was universally hoped that the present season might have posed over without being marked by such disastrous socidents and loss of life as have been too frequently obronicled in the annals of Hongkong

On Sunday last, however, the peculiar state of the atmosphere a remarkable culm closeness, so often the precurior of a heavy, blow (in this part of the aworld together with a low and continually falling burometer, gave sufficient indications to those utlout that it was time to take all due precoutions against what would in all probability turn out bad weather, and possibly a syphoon. Accordingly the P. A. U. Co's steamer Asof. hauled off from the Wharf in the aftermou. olfowed afterwards by the Yesso: the steamship United Service sought shelter under the Kowloop shore and numbers of the larger class of cargo boats and sampans made for Yow-ma-tes and its neighbourhood, the smaller fry betaking themselves to their usual bayens of refuge in Canacany hay to the East, and the beach M. the Barometer bad fallen from 30, where it had stood at 3 p.m., to 29.43, and at 6 n.m., and 8 a.m. yenterday, to 29.23 and 29.19 reapetively. During the forenoon a most remarkable fall continued dutil 2 p.m., when the almost upprecedentedly low range of 28.98 was noted at which the Meroury appeared for a time inclined to remain stationary.

On Sunday evening, the calm which had sionally relieved by light airs and puffs from the Southward and Westward, bad gradually still fast together, the chain of the former increased, with strong guess from the same | round the propeller of the latter. These two quarter, which continued to gain force | vessels fouled the Years, doing considerable morning, when it commenced to blow with in which the Your was handled; and the same terrific fury from the E.N.E. raising a heavy may be said of the Victoria. sea in the harbour. From that time until 2.30 p.m. the wind increased in violence, accompanied by fearful equalls and rain, sweeping before it numbers of large trading junks and such cargo boats and sampans as had been upable to obtain or unwilling to run for shelter.

It is lamentable to have to state that besides the great loss of property, many lives have been | what may be called the "Verdict according to encrificed—it is of course impossible as you to arrive at anything like an estimate of the number. The terrific gusts which passed between noon and 3 p.m. oaused fearful destruction among the trading junks moored between the Canton What and the Sauor's Home. One by one these unfortunate oraft were forced from their anchorage and driven with irresistible fary a sufficiently serviceable type. It is already owards the Westward, many in their route falling athwart the bows of tothers, which still held to their anchors, and carrying them also to destruction, grinding each other to pieces with every rise and fall of the waves and eventually breaking up, and sinking alongside the Praya. In those instances it is estisfactory to relute that the lives of on board were invariably saved, although some fow accidents of crushing between the bonts and will unavoidably occurred Harbour Master's deparment, the police an various bands of volunteurs, both seamer and civilians, who exerted themselves t the utmost to save life by every menne n their power, gotting lines out fortunate, and drifted by in the blinding rain beyond the reach of mecour.

lamentable disasters as the mass of drifting wreck will at once testify; but this is not the only spit in which the marks of devestation in visible. Three or four of the largest and finest atoms against the small jetty commonly, known as " Dent's whar!," and the "Hongkong Light erage and . Storage Co." have lost mearly all their smaller graft, many it is said with cargoes on board. The Prays too, from the Market Wharf to the Westward has suffered severely, although hardly to such an extent as in 1867, when the great question wal settled as to who had to pay the damage but nevertheless this is considerable, and will gunt a good round sum to make good. On against this woman; and she was called shore generally, the damage has not been extento sign boards, tiles, window abutters, &c., but including, of course, all mat erections and bran new wooden shed near the Pacific Mail Company's Offices which has completely collabsed. Breach of promise cases are not the only ones in which a specific promise is Slow March. taken as a starting point, or in which a general, or undefined, or even only implied, promise construed, under ordinary circumstances, as a specific one. Of such Social Verdicta, however. the legal verdiot in a broadh of promise onse advanced that in these cases a specific promise. is taken as a starting point. By this is meant that the promises is considered as de jure possessing that which is promised from the time at which the promise reasonably falls due. No "consideration" is necessary in a contract of this kind. Supposing the man to be ric and his intended wife poor, his promise enrich her is binding without any advantage actually received on his part, at least no tangible advantage. The wife elect is supposed from that moment to have as good a claim on the man's property (or a share of it) within a reasonable time, as the would have if the held his notes of band for the amount. The verdict therefore takes the promise as a stand point. If the promise was made, then the promises possegues de jure so much. We must give it to ber de fucto. If there are other considerations. they may influence us in giving less or more but if so, anything less is negative -- pure loss; anything more is positive-simple gain. (Daily Nows, July, 25.) As the prosecutors of the Bev. Vicar of Frome have given notice of their intention to appear o the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council may at first eight appear that the judgment lelivered by the Dean of Arobes on Faturday be of little consequence. Sir R. J. Phillip more has not undertaken to declare the doctrine of the Church of England as to the nature and conditions of the Best Presence in the Encharist : but he lays it down that " to describe that presence as objective, real, actual, and and therefore Mr. Bennett goes free, and the Clierch Association has to pay its own coats. Mr. Bennett not having once appeared to defend imself during these proceedings has no costs. In all probability some thousands of pounds have been spent in the prosecution, which bacthus only reached its first stage, and it certainly seems a pity that it should be so difficult to make out hat the Church of England does teach on bject to which many of her children attach importance. To many impartial minds, nostomed to take a broad and practical view of the grent interests of dife. it will seem atrance that any class of persons should think it worth while to contend about such a subject as this But those who have looked into Church history know that the real object of this contention. howeverit may be disguised, is the pretention a considerable number of priests of the Church of England to work a miracle as often as they consecrate, bread and wine, and thus to cause a Divine presence at the altar. prespective of the state of mind of the communicant. BOLDIERS BAGGAUE. The military correspondent of the Cologne Conselle remarks that the French go to battle with much less baggings than the Ernseuma did in the Danish war of 1864 and the German war 1 1866. In 1859 even the general of a brigade in the French army in Italy was not allowed to lake more than three horses with him, and the number of transport horses and remounts is much less with the French than with the Prusa nos. This, says the correspondent, is a result of the great experience which the French have had of warfare. "In 1866 we all had by far too many things with us, and a great number of persons accompanied the army as amateurs, who did more barm than good. As we were ilways victorious, this excess of borses, wag gons, and distinguished visitors was not of very much consequence, although in many cases they delayed the arrival of provisions which were Prussian army had been defeated, this multitude of usclose things and people would have caused tremendous confusion. Unnecessary waggone would have impeded the retreat, and perhaps have caused the capture by the enemy of guns, ammunition, and soldiers.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT. We commend the case of John Owen, the Denham murderer, to the consideration of those who advocate the total abolition of espital punishment ; and we invite them, after carefully reading the accounts given in the newspapers of his last bours, to say what punishment it would be possible to substitute in the case of criminals like this. In theory—that is, in the theory of those whose attention we are inviting the end of all punishment is reformation, Looked at, however, as a hard practical matter, and in the light of common experience, does any one bolieve that John Owen was capable of reformation? Every act of his life—from the hideone and unpuralled crime for which he suffered, down to all the minor details of his conduct, his brutal jesting about the hungman his fierce repulsion of the chaplain, the ghastly flippancy of his feigning to forget his victim's name on the scaffold—every set of his life abowed that he was and would ever be a mere wild beast from whom society would never be sife till he was rendered powerless to harm. In ing blesched bi when cases verifix in collocus theories disappear, and mankind is brought face to face with the supreme law of salfpreservation which justifies us in abolishing John Owen as we would abuliab a dangerous beast or reptile. - Pall Mall Gazette.

Extracts.

A Patr of Money Lenders Mr. Abraham Hart was an attorney-so called by himself and friends-living in a genteel street abotting on Gray's Inn-road whose residence and place of business were all beneath the same roof. Mr. Hart was a man in the prime of life, with bluck hate and a black beard, and a new shining hat, and a coat with a velvet collar and silk lining ... He was always dressed in the same way, and had never yet been seen by any of his elibate without his bat on his head. He was pleasant spoken, very ignorant, smiling, joeose man, with a slightly Jewish accent, who knew his business well, pursued it diligently, and considered himself to have a clear conscience. He had certain limits of forbearance with his customthose were passed, he would will the bed from under a dying woman with her babe, or bread diseases of life, such as COSTIVENESS, for from the mouth of a starving child. To do so which they are a perfect specific; HEADACHE, was the necessity of his trade,—for his own relieved and outed by one does. INDIGESTION guidance in which he had made laws. The always removed by them, and the stomach so breaking of those laws by himself would bring toned and strengthened as to provent a return. breaking of those laws by himself would bring toned and strengthened as to prevent a return bis spade to an end, and therefore he declined BAD BREATH cannot exist when the stomach to break them. . . Where Captain Stub- is cleansed by ber lived very few of his friends knew. 'And in what way Captain Stubber had become a captain, none, though many were military mon themselves, had ever learned. But Captain Stubber had a house of call in a very narrow dirty little street near Red Lion square. It was close to a public-house, but did not belong to the public-house. None of the captain's sure remedy, as they never fail in currying of clients and ever seen there any appurted the deprayed bilious secretions that float in the nances of the captain's business. There stomach and destroy the healthy, matural erawere no account books, no ink even, ving for food, Sonr Stomach, Heartburn, Flatuexcept that contained in a little box with lency, and all Derningements of the Digestive a screw, which Captain Stubber would take and Exerctory Organs, are promptly relieved out of his own pocket. Mr. Hart was so far and oured by them. The public should always "cutablished and civilized as to keep a boy, whom bear in mind that Bristol's are the only Pills he called a clerk; but Captain Stubber seemed made of to keep nothing. A dirty little girl at the bouse of call would run and fetch Captain Stubber, if he were within reach; but most usually an appointment had to be made with that are really the captain. Now this gallant officer was a tall thin gentlemen, probably over sixty years of age, with very seedy clothes, and a red nose.

He always had Berlin gloves, very touch torn to the presence of which invaluable resincids. wore - as his sole mark of respectability-a very etiff, cleur, white collar round his neck, and invariably smelt of gin. No one knew where he lived, or how he carried on his business; but, blood, such as he was, he had dealings with large sums of money, or at least with bills professing to stand for large sums, and could never been found without a case in his pocket crammed the Pills, the two Medicines being prepared with these documents. And yet a poor wretch more despicable, more dishonest, more falsa, than Captain Stubber could not have been found in all London. His business was carried on with a small capital borrowed from a firm of low attorneys, who were the real holders of the bills he carried, and the profits which they llowed him to make were very trifling. - Str Harry Hotepur, in Macmillan's Magazine.

Y Pall Mall Gazette, August 12th their system, and take thut dose, justead of The experiments which were commenced following any general rule. esterday at Spoeburyness with the Mitrailieur possess a high interest at the present moment. It is not aften that the quist dispassionate inquiries of the practice ground are carried on contemporaneously with the ruder trials of metual warfare: But in this case, while the French are measuring, with less mathematical scientific precision perhaps, but with a rough and ghastly. ccuracy, the value of this new weapon, we in England are calmly counting hits upon wooden targets, comparing at our lessure round with round, and informing ourselves as to the poten- IT is a true saying, that any preparation intial value of this new instrument of war. No one who was present at Shoeburyness yesterday experience, must be possessed of undeniable and can have failed to have been impressed with the positive virtue, else its career, will be speedily simust painfully sharp contrast between the terminated, and its very name be forgotten conditions under which the mitrailleur was among the myriads of similar failures that have being tried there, and those under which the gone before it. Proved by this test, trial was proceeding, perhaps at that very hour, on the French frontier. The ultimate practical question is, will the two verdicts agree? As yet the Shoeburyness trials have not proceeded becomes at once indisputable and self-evident clusions to be drawn from them unless It was first introduced in the year 1832, and it be a confirmation of the opinion more from that date until the present time, its procertain positions, and under certain conditions, showing an increase in the demand on the prethese weapons would have a high value. As to coding one, until to day it is acknowledged to the exact place of the mitrailleur in war we be the base not yet learnt much, and it is doubtful whether the Shoeburyness experiments will ever sufficiently inform us on this point. For this information we shall have to then to the experience of the French and Prussians; and it as such is prescribed by the leading physicians is well to recognize that the success or failure in America, and recommended by them to their of a particular mitrailleur is a question quite patients in all scrofulous, ulcerous, and eruptive independent of that of its actual military vulue. diseases. BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA should not Before breech-foading small arms were intro be confounded with other so-called sarsaparillas; duced into this country a committee was required it is to state whether it would be desirable to introduce a breech-leading rifle abstractly, and without reference to any particular, pattern of from all others. It is strong and of half Europe was directed to the production enough for the robust man, and is ease for the tion of an efficient breech-loader, and at this weakest infant. Every ingredient in it is moment our difficulty lies rather in the selection of the best arm than in the choice of a good one. We are suffering rather from an embarras de richesses than from a dearth of good arms. So writeregard to los militalistes we bare lithe doubt that if the Montigny mitrailleur be really the best arm of the class yet invented, it is destined to be greatly improved upon if once the word goes forth that England requires such an instrument of warfare. The weapon itself, which has already been more than once described in therefore these pages, and the ammunition which is used with it, have evidently many defects of constructive detail. Once turn on mechanical ingenuity to the production of a mitrailleur, and and take no other. It is the cheapest, you will get in a short time, we doubt not, a strongest, and the best. weapon as superior to the Montigny as is the Martini-Henry rifle to the needle-gun. And this is exactly the point at which the question has now arrived. Yesterday's experiments at Shoeburyness clearly showed that if England is to have a mitrailleur at all she cannot adopt the THE LANGUAGE OF FLOWERS Montigny as it stands. Already, indeed, several alterntions have had to be made in the arm, and the ammunition which was employed was exing with the practice; the mouth s of the cart- ever delighted in likening the purest and holiest ridges became rucked up on entering the sentiments and feelings of the human beart to chamber, causing a sensible reduction in the rapidity of fire; the powder had a suspiciously flower, from the tiny but fragrant, Lily of the discoloured appearance which did not augur upon and made to do duty as the representative of some condition, attribute, or action in life.
